

Report On World food day awareness program:

Prof. Martin Welch from University of Cambridge, United Kingdom in Mangalore

Professor Martin Welch Guest, Professor of Microbial Physiology and Metabolism, Department of Biochemistry, University of Cambridge, Cambridge, United Kingdom delivered a guest lecture on “Metabolic control of virulence and biofilm formation by Pseudomonas aeruginosa; metabolism as a target for antimicrobial development” at Yenepoya University Campus on 16.10.2023, which was attended by more 100 participants. As part of Scientific social responsibility, the NSS unit of Yenepoya Research Center, Mangalore conducted World food day awareness program at Bala Samarakshana Kendra, Kutharpadav. Professor Martin Welch was Chief Guest interacted with children’s and briefed about importance of hygiene and balance food diet benefits. On 18.10.2023, Professor Welch will interact with students of The Yenepoya Institute of Arts, Science, Commerce and Management, Mangalore and deliver a Guest lecture on “The neighbors have their say: the influence of co-habiting species on the biology and antimicrobial response of Pseudomonas aeruginosa”.

